Background

Broadway Museum and Art Gallery, an independent Community Museum run by Tudor House Broadway Trust, is becoming an increasingly vibrant part of the Broadway scene, with new galleries devoted to the Broadway Colony of artists and writers, and the virtuoso micro-sculptures of artist Willard Wigan.

We are continuing our prestigious series of exhibitions in association with the Ashmolean Museum Oxford, and this summer's exhibition (opening 18 May) Painting Faces: The Art of Flattery promises to be both beautiful and fun. We have greatly expanded our programme of lectures, thanks to the generous support of the NFU (Moreton-in-Marsh). Pick up a leaflet at the Museum or visit our website for details.

Our art classes and programmes for children and families are attracting increasing attendance, and we have three recognition and social events planned for the year.

More and more people are seeing the value of hiring our historic building for their private or company events. The upgrade of our Kitchen, funded by a national charity, is in hand.

As an independent community Museum, none of this would be possible without support. Please remember if you are a UK taxpayer, your gift to the Museum is eligible for Gift Aid.
